Where the damage is.

11,856 verified storm-hit addresses, every one traced to a National Weather Service hail report. 213 have a phone number that is not DNC-flagged.

Read this before you build a schedule. DFW has had no qualifying hail since September 27. Nobody is chasing fresh damage, and that is the opportunity: these are homes hit between April and September that still have not been inspected, and Texas policies put a filing deadline on the date of loss, some as short as a year. You are not early. You are the last call before the window shuts.

This is a door operation, not a call floor. Only 213 of 11,856 addresses are legally dialable after the DNC scrub, under a day of work for one setter. The other 11,643 are door-knock only. Staff accordingly, and buy skip-trace against the big April storm days before hiring a second phone.

Rows reading "… County" are areas where the appraisal district publishes no city name. Johnson and Parker are the big ones. Work those off the map in the tool and name the street, not a guessed city.

April 28 put down 4.5-inch hail, softball size, and 3,716 of those homes are still unworked. A roof under that stone is not a repair conversation.

HOW TO WORK IT

- Knockers: Fort Worth, Rhome and Benbrook off April 26 (up to 3″), then the April 28 belt through Johnson County, Rockwall, Royse City, Southlake and Keller.
- Setters: Fort Worth (93), Dallas County (45), Commerce (33), Azle (22), Ennis (8), Benbrook (5). That is the entire dialable list. Burn it, then knock.
- Always open with the date and the stone size for that address. Pull it from the tool. "Storms in your area" is a telemarketer. "Two and a half inch hail on April 26" is a neighbor.
- Mark every door in the tool the same day. One tap, and it carries your name.

TERRITORY

One city, one rep. The office assigns areas at `/admin/territories`; you open the knock tool as `/admin/storms?key=…&rep=YourName` and it lands on your own cities. If you are seeing the whole metroplex, your territory is not assigned yet. Call the office before you knock.
